On November 22, the representatives of the Incheon Civil Society Organizations met Kim In-wook, the chief justice of Incheon District Court and asked to support for the establishment of external court of the Seoul High Court. The City originally attempted to attract the external court in opening of the Incheon Family Court in March last year but failed. The external courts are currently in operation in Chuncheon, Changwon, Cheongju, Jeonju and Jeju. Of the metropolitan cities, only Incheon and Ulsan do not have the external court. Moreover, citizens should go to the Seoul High Court because there is no external court in Incheon even though more than 2,000 appellate trials are required annually in Incheon, Bucheon and Gimpo of Gyeonggi-do.
